Top Security launches free and secure email service

As hackers and cyber criminals become increasingly sophisticated in their quest to corrupt, infect and steal via e-mail, Irish owned security firm, Top Security has launched a free web-based email service which provides the ultimate in email security.

Called Topmail, and available at www.topmail.ie, the service is aimed both at the home and small business user looking for a highly secure and easy to manage email account.

Topmail deploys on three levels of anti-virus and three levels of anti-spam, as well as strong content filtering, updating every seven minutes to protect against fast-breaking, evolving threats. Unlike other web mail services, Topmail also offers this highly advanced and accurate security add-on for free.

The service is fully automated; meaning that even the most inexperienced email users can easily activate it and its accompanying security features. For the small business user the added expense of a managed services or web hosting company, or the costs incurred in purchasing additional hardware or software for security purposes, is also eliminated.

Founder and Group Chairman of Top Security, Emmet O'Rafferty refers to the value of Topmail.

"Core to the Topmail service is its simplicity and effectiveness. It offers a means of communicating securely via email without the worry of spam and viruses or receiving offensive material that can often disable, if not destroy, a person's PC or laptop in one simple click." Topmail provides peace of mind that the emails you are accessing are 'harmless'-something other free web-based email services can't do," he said.
